MULTILINGUAL COMPUTING & TECHNOLOGY SELECTS
FOREIGNEXCHANGE CEO FOR EDITORIAL BOARD

BOSTON, MA (June 11, 2001)—ForeignExchange Translations, a leading provider of translation and localization services to regulated industries, today announced that Andres Heuberger, ForeignExchange's President and CEO, has accepted an invitation to join the editorial board of the industry publication MultiLingual Computing & Technology.

The leading publication in the localization industry, MultiLingual Computing & Technology boasts a rapidly growing readership of over 20,000 around the world. Readers are from multinational corporations, small businesses, software publishers, internal corporate software development groups, documentation groups, international software management and marketing groups, translators, educational institutions and government agencies

"I am honored to announce the addition of Andres Heuberger to our Editorial Board," says Seth Schneider, publisher of MultiLingual Computing & Technology. Schneider continues: "I find that it's important to get input from industry experts. The editorial board provides us with direction and feedback for improving and strengthening the magazine."

"I am proud to contribute to the leading publication in our industry," says ForeignExchange's Heuberger. "MutiLingual Computing & Technology shares ForeignExchange's passion for providing useful, value-added, and objective information to buyers of localization services."

In addition to his editorial board position, Heuberger regularly writes articles and speaks at industry events on issues related to web globalization, technical translation, and software localization. He also publishes ForeignExchange's newsletter called Multilingual Compliance News.
