ForeignExchange Compliant with EN 15038:2006

Company meets or exceeds European standard for translation service providers

Waltham, MA, January 31, 2008 – ForeignExchange Translations is pleased to announce that its processes are in full compliance with the European standard EN 15038:2006, for translation service providers. This announcement comes after a scrupulous evaluation of all internal processes and a point-by-point comparison with the EN 15038 guidance.

According to the introduction to the EN standard document, “the purpose of the standard is to establish and define the requirements for the provision of quality services by translation service providers. It encompasses the core translation process and all other related aspects involved in providing the service, including quality assurance and traceability.”

The standard provides guidance on such topics as human resources, linguist competency, technical resources, project management, client relationships and quality management. In each area, the internal audit conducted by ForeignExchange’s quality team found full compliance. In some cases, ForeignExchange exceeds the standard. The company has a rigorous screening and hiring process for staff and linguists and provides them with the best state of the art tools available and holds all processes to a strict quality system, which is certified to ISO 9000:2001. Client requirements, quality feedback and complaint handling are captured systematically and clients are surveyed annually for their satisfaction.

Sonia Monahan, Vice President of Operations at ForeignExchange, who oversaw the audit, summarizes by saying, “I [compared] each point of EN 15038 to our processes and I am confident that we are fully compliant with the standard.

“Our compliance is further assurance to our clients that we are a trusted partner for their translation needs.”
